VICTORIAN CREW DIES IN CLASSIC ADELAIDE CRASH

Two Victorian competitors in the Classic Adelaide tarmac rally were killed in a crash on the South Australian event on Thursday.

They were driver Gary Tierney and co-driver David Carra both from Melbourne.

Their 1974 Porsche 911RS skidded off a right-hand bend and struck a tree on Norsworthy Road, Forreston, about 40 kilometres north-east of Adelaide.

An emergency medical vehicle stationed at the start of the stage attended the crash, but both crew members were pronounced dead at the scene.

Tierney and Carra were well regarded rally competitors with many years' experience in tarmac events around Australia.
